Crews Soon Take to Water.

River Fairly Alive With Frail
Craft Scudding Along Under Their Burdens of Brawny Young Athletes.

All was bustle and activity at the various boathouses along the Potomac yesterday afternoon, with the hourly arrival of crews entered for the Middle States Regatta tomorrow, under the auspices of the Potomac Boat Club. Brawny and husky young men of superb physique, sturdy limbs and deep chests were lounging around the Potomac, Georgetown, and Annapolis clubhouses, while not a few were to be found at the Cumberland boathouse, all talking rowing and speculating on the respective chances of the crews entered.

The Times Welcomed

Strange to say, none of the crews knew who their contestants were to be in the various events carded until The Times was received at the different clubhouses. The entries as published there yesterday were eagerly scanned and speculation ran rife. The Annapolis crew, of Baltimore, have been quartered at the Potomac clubhouse since Thursday, and under the watchful eye of Mr. Wray, their coach, have had frequent workouts on the river.

All of the crews and individual oarsmen are now here and many warm greetings were exchanged along the waterfront last evening. Titus, Juvenal and Fussell were the center of an admiring group. The latter will not row in the Middle States as it is said he has had a disagreement with the governors of the Vesper Club of Philadelphia, because of his refusal to row in that club's eight. Juvenal enthusiastically told of his recent trip abroad, where he rowed for the Diamond Sculls on the Thames and the royal treatment he received.

Vail to the Rescue.

Harry Vail, the veteran coach at the Annapolis club, and intermediate four on the water and both boats worked out fast miles under his watchful eye. The Annapolis four are the fastest quartet on the river and are in a class all to themselves. Mr. Vail figured in a thrilling rescue just as a stiff blow preceded the impending storm. A skiff sailed by, two young men capsized and both of the occupants became exhausted from their long struggle in the water. Mr. Vail went to their aid and was towing them over to the Virginia shore when one of the young men relaxed his hold on the stern of his skiff and sank. Vail was after him in a flash and brought him safely to shore.

Directory of Crews.

The crews are quartered as follows: Annapolis—Columbus of Allegheny, New York Athletics, and Quaker City; at Georgetown—Arlia of Baltimore, Dauntless, Bohemians, Lone Stars, Fallsades, Seawanhaka, Sheephead, and Unions, of New York, Vespera, West Philadelphia, and Montrose, of Philadelphia; at Potomac—Wachusett, of Worcester; Old Dominion of Alexandria; Arundels, of Baltimore; Crescents, of Malta; Pennsylvania Barge, and Fairmounts, of Philadelphia; Atlantas, Harlems, Nassaus, Metropolitans, and Ravenswoods, of New York.

To Patrol Course.

For the first time in the history of rowing on the Potomac the strong arm of the United States will come into play in such affairs, as under the law of April 19, 1896, it is the duty of the Government to see to it that there is no overcrowding of vessels, and that the course is kept clear. Any violation will subject those guilty to fine in the regular courts. With this view of the case Acting Secretary James R. Garfield has notified the Potomac regatta committee that the course will be patrolled with a vessel and the only boats allowed thereon will be the referee, visitors and the District police craft. This means a clear course from start to finish, and is given as a warning to all others to keep in bounds.

As stated previously, the referee craft will be the famous torpedo boat Cushing, which in itself will be a spectacular attraction to the regatta. The guest boat will be the Bartholdi, while Harbor-master Sutton and the Vigilant will be the other. These will be the only boats allowed on the course. The clerk of the course will use a small launch, but he will keep within bounds.

According to the present program there will be four races in the morning, the first to start at 10 o'clock. Regular program.

The regular program will begin at 10 o'clock promptly and will be rowed at intervals of twenty minutes, thus allowing every race to be rowed in daylight. It will bring the last event about 5 o'clock. In order that the spectators may follow the races with accuracy, the participants will all occupy a position in the contests and bear a color corresponding with that position. They are numbered from the Virginia shore to the Maryland side of the river and are as follows:

No. 1, red; No. 2, white; No. 3, blue; No. 4, yellow; No. 5, black; No. 6, green; No. 7, red and white; No. 8, blue and white. The sculler and the bow man of the crew occupying these particular positions will wear the color, and by reference to the official program it can be easily determined which club the competitors represent. Then, too, on the Bartholdi will be displayed the colors of the first and second crew, and the time required to row the course will appear on a blackboard. This is done to give everyone along the course the correct result of every contest.

DEFEAT OF FRIDAY

Senators Smothered by the Highlanders.

DUNKLE GETS HIS BUMPS

Blonde Twirler Hammered for Fifteen
Hits—Second Game Stopped by Rain and Another Defeat Averted.

(Special to The Washington Times.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—If it were not that Washington baseball enthusiasts are thoroughly accustomed to seeing the Senators beaten, it would be a shame to tell what the Highlanders did to Tom Loftus' outfit at League Park this afternoon.

Two games were scheduled, but it is well for the tailenders that the rain came soon after the second session opened. Otherwise it would be necessary to tell how the Senators were trampled upon in two games.

Senators Were Easy.

What local enthusiasts now wonder at is how did the Senators manage to win from the Highlanders on Friday. Griffith's men must have been skylarking. The local American Leaguers certainly showed how bitter they were for the defeat on Friday, and they went in and made the Washingtons look like a lot of amateurs.

Wolfe was sent in to pitch for the Highlanders principally because he had a lot of his Kansas City friends in the stands, who are here attending the convention of the Eagles. Wolfe always held the Senators in check, indeed, he let up a bit when the game was safe, and that is how the visitors got their runs. Dunkle's pitching just suited the Highlanders. It is a long time since Dunkle has seen his curves hit so hard. There were home runs, three-baggers and doubles. The Highlanders, with their long distance hitting, rolled up a total of twenty-five bases. They made a good start on Orlin in the second game, but a terrific storm spoiled the fun, and accidentally caused a panic among the many women in the stand.

Lightning played pranks all around the park. A bolt struck a tree in the grounds across the street. After the storm passed over, the grounds were too wet for play. The score was 3 to 1 in favor of the Highlanders.

How It Happened.

The New Yorks were first to score in the third inning, getting a run on Wolfe's double, a sacrifice, and Keeler's single. The following round saw the finish of the Senators. It is a long time since New Yorkers have been treated to such clean hitting. A triple, a double, and five singles were made off Dunkle, yielding five runs. Elberfeld came to the bat twice, getting a triple and a single.

BOSTONIANS SMOTHER
CHAMPION ATHLETICS

BOSTON, Sept. 5.—The Boston Americans put it all over the Athletics this afternoon, during rain and darkness, and pounded Coakley, the Athletics' new twirler, for 18 hits, with a total of 21 bases. Dougherty led at the bat for Boston, securing three triples and two singles out of five times at bat. The game this afternoon closed the series between these two teams and leaves the coming champions with more games to their credit than the present holders of the title. The game was called at the end of the Athletics' half of the eighth on account of darkness.
